

Life Care Planning

Life care planning is the process of assessing the rehabilitation and long-term needs for reasonable and necessary goods and services of a person who has sustained a catastrophic injury or who has chronic health problems. The purpose of the life-care plan is to help the individual achieve his or her best health and/or maximum level of independence.

The life care plan is a forecast of the many contingencies that can occur in the life of individuals with catastrophic spinal and brain injuries, limb loss and other occupational injuries which may result in costs over $100,000.

Serving as a lifetime “care map,” the life care plan is typically used in conjunction with medical and vocational case management. Having a Life care plan prepared to determine what lies ahead for an individual with catastrophic injuries is one key to controlling future medical costs and helps ensure the individual’s utmost quality of life.

In workers’ compensation cases, life care plans are often needed by insurance carriers, claims professionals and attorneys in litigation, and in cases involving Medicare Set-Asides.

At Hoover, our life care plans are developed by professionals with nationally recognized certifications in life care planning and related fields, such as catastrophic case management and medical and vocational rehabilitation.

Our experts prepare life care plans based on a thorough review of medical and other records combined with the knowledge of legitimate costs for goods and services and the range of future accommodations that often must be made during the course of the catastrophically injured person’s lifetime.
